Collective Solidarity Health Nuremberg

What does my rent or my job have to do with my health?

The conditions in which we live, work, reside and spend our leisure time have a decisive effect on how healthy or ill we are.

Political and social factors such as rent increases, precarious employment, low income, racism or poverty in old age have a demonstrably greater impact on health than individual behaviour or the quality of medical care alone.

Health is therefore not an individual resource whose preservation depends solely on personal responsibility or health-promoting behaviour, but on political and social factors, so-called "social determinants of health".

Following the example of the Poliklinik Syndikat, we want to establish a district health centre in Nuremberg based on solidarity.

Would you like to join us?
Visit our homepage and get in touch with us by email! We look forward to exchanging ideas and meeting people.

The aim is to create a place where health inequality can be counteracted and the fundamental causes of illness can be addressed and changed. The centre should be based on ideas from the district, be a shared place of learning and offer a space to meet and exchange ideas.
